I believe that one of our greatest gifts is the creative imagination, and it is the most important part of my artistic explorations. As an artist, I have been greatly influenced by my Cherokee heritage, my immersion in Indigenous culture, and world travels. My major mediums are oil painting, pastel, gourd art, and mask making. I have shown and won numerous awards at Native American art shows across the country.

Having lived in Crestone, CO since 2001, Adam Kinney has developed his own unique relationship to being an artist. What started out as an unceasing, innate need to make art, has slowly transformed into a fusion of original creativity and a mature discovery of different means to provide for his blossoming family. This combination of intentions has resulted in the evolution of his small manufacturing business, Blue Earth Design. He has found that what keeps his spirit inspired is his ability to access his own artistic expression through the venue of the shop. He hopes you can stop by and see how it all happens.

from Shumei Shop / MoSPACE

Working in mixed media: painting, photography, poetry, and film, the "creative" M.E. VanWalleghan strives to capture the invisible moments that shape our world—from imagining what a person is thinking just before death to the healing of #metoo trauma—all while evoking the ethereal bonds that connect us to each other.

Honoring the expressions and wisdom of the ancient civilization of Anawak through Sacred Medicine Art. The memories, the dreams and the essence of their timeless presence forging the spirit blooming in creations that heal, renew and fortify the human cosmic consciousness. The Toltek that never dies. The mysterious force transforming the energy that perpetuates the tree of life... shading foliage... moving... evolving... becoming green again...

My choice of subject comes from my interest in natural beauty and emotional connections in nature. I enjoy photographing with intention to capture candid moments in nature of either wildlife or the landscape. I like to photograph under natural conditions to communicate the increasingly less common natural moment in time. Recently I have focused on wildlife in movement or emotion while trying to capture mood through light and composition.

Stephen Futral aka Ish, has shown and sold his paintings in the USA, Canada, France, Ireland, and Lebanon. He holds workshops in his various mediums of expression: Encaustics and encaustic monotype prints, Sumi ink in Japanese style brushstroke, acrylics, and mixed media. He's also worked on a TV commercial and was assistant art director on a Hollywood film.

As a writer I create images in the minds of my readers. As an artist some of my inspiration comes from my writing or others' works and quotes. Most of the time, I start with no expected outcomes in mind, and await to see what will emerge. I will be showing "My Surprises" in acrylic and watercolor.

Works made with the the aim of enabling elemental energies of nature and inner nature to dance into the visible. Featured this year: recent mixed media paintings and drawings with imagery channeled from personal and collective unconscious and beyond through the process of their making. Also showing expressive landscapes, perhaps a nature installation and painterly surprises. Also on view: paintings, works on paper and artist books by Robin Ross (1954-2015)

11 Alan & Julie Sutherland

138 Skyview Way

Come by the house to see new works and unseen works of the past by myself or my late wife Julie! INDESCRIBABLE. Not much you can say when you see the display at the chalet atop Skyview Way.

12 Donald Caledare

199 Evergreen Overlook

I work from imagination, dreams, the environment, philosophy and mythology to form a body of eclectic art; myriad designs, memories on diverse levels, reflecting a unique movement through time.

At an early age I learned to sew, making many of my clothes and later sewing for my family. In 2008, my husband and I moved from Corpus Christi, TX to begin our retirement years here in Crestone, CO. I have been making quilts for over 20 years and enjoy learning new artful techniques and designs.

In art making, my personal myths get awakened. Dreams, imagination, visions give me clues to my soul and incarnation. My "Dreamscapes/ Innerscapes" painting series is of a space and time unknown. Wisps of past lives, vague remembrances of events, walks in nature, inform my heart-mind connection with spirit. These connectivities form the under-layers of my art pieces and inspire the completion of the images.

I'm happy reiterating last year's stated ambition to animate my serial comix, adding original music & narration. A parallel reality I call "The Halodian Cosmosis" showcases God's granddaughter (not shown here) & other long-patient creations who'd like to move, to dance & speak & sing on the world-wide web. Someday, okay? Seen here, are some halos flying around ready for the story to commence. Probably tour time, I'll hang some sample panels & dangle images in the juniper grove, an al fresco gallery with a hammock...that becomes my favorite doodling locale & visitors' respite. Come see if I'm wearing my own halo, chosen over Horns, then have fun in talk of putting opposites together & The United States of a Miracle.

I draw my inspiration from nature, mythology and the various cultures where I have lived: from my native Sweden to traditional art and zen studies in Japan, then Italy and France with its renaissance culture, and now Crestone, with its powerful wilderness and spiritual silence. Luminous Silks and Gilded Velvets, dyed and block printed by hand. Wallhangings, art to wear, home decor and more.

In her landscapes, painter and pastel artist Emmy Savage explores the relationship between solitude, contemplation and spiritual connectedness. Her subjects range from the mountain and skiescapes of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains to the intricate architecture of the corrals and cattle chutes of the Luis Maria Baca Wildlife Refuge. Also a writer, Emmy just completed a book on hiking as spiritual practice.

My inspiration comes from classic Greek and Roman sculpture. With no desire to reinvent anything I aspire to put my own interpretation to traditional poses. I sometimes try to make three dimensions out of two dimensional drawings and paintings. In the end I want to create a figure that if you could breathe life into it, it would be comfortable with what I've given it. That is, it would not be wanting of hip or knee replacement or any other issues.

Drawings, hand held sculpture, and immersive worlds of primordial inland seas and verdant soul fields. Visitors welcome to enjoy wide vistas of San Luis Valley; while meandering through interior & outdoor installations, slip into places of quiet contemplation, and engage in creative fellowship.

20 Kathy Strathearn

3616 Splendid Terrace

303-243-1253

kathystrathearn@aol.com

While Kathy has always been creative with her hands, she did not discover the art of tapestry weaving until 2000. It has taken hold of her and she hasn't stopped. The tapestry weavings she creates are full of symbolic spiritual symbols. Each line of her weavings is filled with love and healing thoughts as she continues down her spiritual path. She mostly enjoys Navajo style, Rio Grande and Zapotec weaving. This is her first year on the Crestone Artist's tour. Please come by and see where she creates magic.

21 Leigha Nicole

3630 Splendid Way

719-209-8518

leighanicole@gmail.com

www.splendidyoiga.com

Leigha's art is a blend of traditional Chinese painting, Japanese sumi-e and western watercolor. Her career in dance, yoga and bodywork 1983-2009 brought her to many different parts of Asia, which led her to her main teacher; Emmy-award winning artist Ning Yeh. She has been studying the Hsieh-I style of Chinese brush painting with him for over 30 years. She hopes the breathtaking seasonal beauty of Crestone will inspire her art for years to come.
